

Public and Private Places

There are some things I can do in front of people and some things that I should do by myself.

These are called “public” or “private” behaviors.

Public behaviors are things I can do in a place where other people may be around.

Public behaviors are things like eating lunch, talking to a friend, or giving a friend a hug.

Private behaviors are things I do when I'm alone in a private place.

Private behaviors are things like adjusting my underwear or touching my private parts.

Pennsylvania's leading source of autism-related resources and information
877-231-4244

The ASERT Collaborative is funded by the Office of Developmental Programs, PA Department of Human Services