

I am in charge of my body, and I can choose who touches me.

My private parts are the parts of my body covered by a bathing suit.

If someone is touching me and I don't want them to, I should say "no" or "stop"

I should say it loudly.

If they don't stop, I should try to leave and go into a room where I am safe.

If someone touches me and I don't like it, I should tell a parent or another adult I trust.

This campaign promotes the idea of body autonomy for individuals with disabilities. ASERT has partnered with researchers at the National Crime Victims Research and Treatment Center at the Medical University of South Carolina to develop resources for the Be Safe campaign.

The Autism Services, Education, Resources and Training (ASERT) Collaborative is a statewide initiative funded by the Bureau of Autism Services, PA Department of Human Services.