

Behavioral Health Managed Care Organization (BHMCO)

General

A BHMCO is a group of professionals that manage and oversee the organizations that provide behavioral health services. Each region of the state has its own BHMCO, for a total of 5 in Pennsylvania. This resource provides information about BHMCO's and how they can help.

What does a BHMCO do for me?

BHMCOs impact individuals who use behavioral health services in a few different ways. BHMCOs make sure that the person is getting good care, getting the services they need, and that the company providing the service is using best practice to treat the person. BHMCOs can also help coordinate care between service providers, making it easier for the patient. BHMCOs also provide case management to link people to services.

How do I access services?

First, find your region's BHMCO. Below is a list of the BHMCO's in Pennsylvania and counties they cover. Once you've found your BHMCO, contact the member services department to get started. They will ask questions and determine your need and eligibility for services.

What is case management?

Case management is a service provided by BHMCO's to help people find, start and keep the services and care they need. A person is assigned a case manager, sometimes called a care manager, who will work directly with people to identify needs and find resources to help meet those needs.
