

Sensory Friendly Morning

at the Philadelphia Museum of Art

Join Us and Explore the Drawing Room

Individuals on the autism spectrum or with sensory sensitivities and their families are invited to join us on Sunday, May 3 from 9:00 AM - 10:00 AM.

- Pre-visit materials including a photo-illustrated “Social Story” sent to all registered participants to help prepare for the experience
- Experience one area of the museum before busy public hours
- Open-ended art activities designed to be flexible for all ages and abilities
- Low-sensory zone available for quiet breaks
- Fidgets and noise-cancelling headphones available to borrow
- On-hand support from Occupational Therapy student volunteers from Thomas Jefferson University

Sensory Friendly Morning is free but does require advance registration.
Please email AccessProg@philamuseum.org to reserve your spot.
